Foreword.

What is the purpose of a strong brand: to attract customers, to build loyalty, to motivate staff? All true, but for a commercial brand at least, the first answer must always be ‘to make money’.

Huge investments are made in the design, launch, and ongoing promotion of brands. Given their potential financial value, this makes sense. Unfortunately, most organisations fail to go beyond that, missing huge opportunities to effectively make use of what are often their most important assets. Monitoring of brand performance should be the next step, but is often sporadic. Where it does take place, it frequently lacks financial rigour and is heavily reliant on qualitative measures, poorly understood by non-marketers.

As a result, marketing teams struggle to communicate the value of their work and boards then underestimate the significance of their brands to the business. Sceptical finance teams, unconvinced by what they perceive as marketing mumbo jumbo, may fail to agree necessary investments. What marketing spend there is, can end up poorly directed as marketers are left to operate with insufficient financial guidance or accountability. The end result can be a slow but steady downward spiral of poor communication, wasted resources, and a negative impact on the bottom line.

Brand Finance bridges the gap between marketing and finance. Our teams have experience across a wide range of disciplines from market research and visual identity, to tax and accounting. We understand the importance of design, advertising, and marketing, but we also believe that the ultimate and overriding purpose of brands is to make money. That is why we connect brands to the bottom line.

By valuing brands, we provide a mutually intelligible language for marketing and finance teams. Marketers then have the ability to communicate the significance of what they do, and boards can use the information to chart a course that maximises profits. Without knowing the precise, financial value of an asset, how can you know if you are maximising your returns? If you are intending to license a brand, how can you know you are getting a fair price? If you are intending to sell, how do you know what the right time is? How do you decide which brands to discontinue, whether to rebrand and how to arrange your brand architecture? Brand Finance has conducted thousands of brand and branded business valuations to help answer these questions.

Brand Finance’s research revealed the compelling link between strong brands and stock market performance. It was found that investing in highly-branded companies would lead to a return almost double that of the average for the S&P 500 as a whole.

Acknowledging and managing a company’s intangible assets taps into the hidden value that lies within it. The following report is a first step to understanding more about brands, how to value them and how to use that information to benefit the business.

The team and I look forward to continuing the conversation with you.

Starbucks’ Grind Pays Off as its Named Most Valuable Restaurant Brand for 5th Consecutive Year.

- Starbucks has retained top spot as world’s most valuable restaurant brand for 5th consecutive year, brand value US$38.4 billion
- US chains dominate ranking, claiming first 8 spots and 20 of the total 25
- Jack in the Box is fastest growing restaurant brand, surging 84% to claim 16th place, brand value US$1.7 billion
- Papa John’s is highest ranked newcomer, claiming 19th place
- British pub chain Wetherspoon is only bar or pub brand in ranking in 21st, despite suffering controversy and disruption from COVID-19
- McDonald’s has continued reign as world’s strongest restaurant brand, with a Brand Strength Index (BSI) score of 86.9 out of 100
Executive Summary.
COVID-19 has had a serious impact on the restaurant industry globally, with more than half of the brands in this year’s Brand Finance Restaurants 25 2021 ranking declining in brand value and the total value of the world’s top 25 most valuable restaurant brands dropping from US$162.1 billion in 2020 to US$153.9 billion in 2021.

Many governments responded to the outbreak of the pandemic by closing or severely curtailing the activities of the restaurant industry, meaning many brands had to undertake a complete overhaul in operating practices, with a renewed focus on drive-through, mobile ordering, and meal delivery services.

Starbucks cashes in
Starbucks has retained the title of the world’s most valuable restaurant brand for the 5th consecutive year, despite recording a 6% drop in brand value to US$38.4 billion.

The Seattle-based coffee chain stands out from the rest of the American brands in the ranking, which are predominantly focused on fast food. In recent years the brand has, however, expanded its culinary offering and thus is in good company amongst these food-focused brands.

American chains dine out on success
US fast food chains dominate the Brand Finance Restaurants 25 2021 ranking, claiming the first eight spots and 20 out of the total 25. Altogether, US brands account for a staggering 92% of the total brand value in the ranking.

This dominance reasserts the US’s status as the world leader in the fast-food industry. This is notable at a time when health-conscious marketing and regulation are increasingly debated and pursued, particularly in Western Europe. These brands’ continued dominance showcases the resilience and ongoing appeal of cheap, well-known, and often unhealthy food brands.

Richard Haigh
Managing Director, Brand Finance

The restaurant sector has shown remarkable adaptability in the face of unforeseen and challenging circumstances brought about by COVID-19. The efforts to refocus on at-home dining and the investment in digital presence have inured many of the biggest brands from far more dire consequences. The pace of vaccine distribution - particularly across the US and the UK - means there are signs of hope yet for the restaurant sector, with many customers eager to return to socialising and dining together.

Richard Haigh
Managing Director, Brand Finance
Beyond the scale and influence of American restaurant brands, the response of state-level governments in the US was broadly far less severe than in most other nations, with restrictions predominantly limiting indoor dining rather than in-restaurant dining entirely, meaning these brands could shelter themselves from the fallout of the pandemic more successfully.

Jack in the Box pops up

The fastest growing brand in the ranking is Jack in the Box, following an impressive 84% brand value growth to US$1.7 billion, simultaneously jumping 7 spots to 16th. The Californian brand was notable for its effective social media marketing campaigns throughout the pandemic – from encouraging customers to stay at home with its #StayInTheBox tag, to hosting a virtual prom for high school students.

The brand continued to provide a full menu and remain open 24 hours during the crisis and benefited from its existing dining patterns, where 90% of its sales pre-pandemic were takeaways. Jack in the Box implemented emergency paid sick leave to employees and donated old uniforms to be converted into PPE.

Papa John’s gets a slice of the action

Papa John’s is the highest ranked newcomer in 19th, with a brand value of US$1.1 billion, and is the third highest ranked pizza brand after Dominos (up 7% to US$6.1 billion) and Pizza Hut (down 6% to US$5.1 billion) in 5th and 8th, respectively.

With consumer habits being forced to change towards delivery and collection, brands that are already set up to accommodate this under their operations have largely managed to shelter themselves somewhat from the damage of the pandemic. Papa John’s leveraged this change extremely effectively and recorded month after month of record sales throughout 2020 – delivering the best sales in the brand’s history.

Papa John’s, founded in Indiana in 1984, implemented a series of Covid-safe measures to ensure the continuation of business during the pandemic. This included contact-free delivery and an expanded benefits package for employees, including free virtual doctors’ appointments.
UK’s Wetherspoon in 21st

British pub chain Wetherspoon is the only bar or pub chain to feature in the ranking. Wetherspoon boasts a vast portfolio of over 900 pubs and hotels spanning the nation and is renowned for its bargain booze and often spectacular buildings. The brand and its outspoken chairman Tim Martin faced criticism for a lacklustre response to the pandemic and accusations of abandoning staff, as well as displaying ‘anti-lockdown propaganda’. Despite this controversy, the chain has fared remarkably well given the uncertainty that has plagued the British dining and hospitality sector over the past year, claiming 21st place in the ranking and maintaining its brand value of US$1.0 billion.

McDonald’s is lovin’ it

In addition to measuring overall brand value, Brand Finance also determines the relative strength of brands through a balanced scorecard of metrics evaluating marketing investment, customer familiarity, staff satisfaction, and corporate reputation. According to these criteria, McDonald’s (down 10% to US$33.8 billion) remains the strongest restaurant brand in the world with a Brand Strength Index (BSI) score of 86.9 out of 100 and a corresponding AAA brand strength rating.

With more than 38,000 restaurants in 118 countries, McDonald’s reach is unmatched. Its universally recognised ‘golden arches’ as well as advertising campaigns in recent years focused on the brand’s community outreach and ethical sourcing of its ingredients are key contributors to the brand’s strength.

In response to COVID-19, like many other restaurants, the chain renewed its focus on its ‘drive-thru’ and delivery capacity, as well as enhancing its digital presence. McDonald’s has also taken a proactive stance in terms of controlling the virus. Social distancing and hygiene measures are in force in restaurants globally. In US states where rules on indoor dining and mask wearing have been relaxed, McDonald’s has taken more stringent measures voluntarily, limiting in-store dining and mandating mask-wearing. Globally, the brand has donated US$3.1 million in food to support communities during the pandemic.
Sector Reputation Analysis.

Benchmarking against the very best

Brand Finance’s brand evaluations are designed to facilitate broader comparisons with brands across markets, and both within and across industries. This provides a more rounded assessment of brand strength, with benchmarking against the very best.

This perspective is particularly important as brand categories converge, with new technologies enabling disruption and brands seeking tactical entry into neighbouring categories. Brands with a strong reputation also have licensing opportunities in new sectors.

This year’s global sector reputation rankings from our B2C research included a significantly larger number of product categories, with scores for over 2,500 brands.

Reputation on the up

Overall, reputation scores are slightly higher in 2021 across sectors covered both this year and last. In part, this reverses a small dip from 2020, but the impact of COVID-19 cannot be discounted. In a challenging year, consumers have relied upon and tested brands in different ways, and the best brands have stood up well to the challenge, keeping kitchens and wardrobes stocked, connections running, and essential services available.

Supermarkets, restaurants, and apparel shine

In many countries, being able to obtain basic groceries became a challenge for the first time in decades, as shopping was restricted and demand for online delivery slots surged. But by and large, supermarkets have responded well, and consumers have noted this. The average reputation score in the sector increased significantly year-on-year, supermarkets have perhaps squeezed the big food brands somewhat.

FMCG brands have outstanding reputation

Major cosmetics and food brands have the highest reputations, on average, a reminder of the enduring value of a strong brand – some of the top performers are over a century old. The positive reputations of global giants such as Johnson & Johnson, Danone, and (in some markets) Nestlé have been nurtured and refreshed over long periods. Local favourites, such as BiB (Mexico) and Amul (India), show that they can match their global counterparts.

The slight cloud for the food sector is the more ‘average’ reputation that some of the big brands have in a number of developed markets, such as the UK. Here, supermarkets have perhaps squeezed the big food brands somewhat.

Tech admired, but not universally

The overall ranking of the tech sector fell slightly, and while the biggest brands such as YouTube, Google, and Apple continue to enjoy strong reputations, not all consumers are in love with these brands. Amazon, for example, ranks high in some markets (#1 in the sector in the USA, #3 in Spain), but polarises in some markets (e.g. Sweden, France). Similarly, the mixed reputation of brands such as Facebook shows no sign of significant improvement. Many consumers may support the increasing regulation of tech giants, and it might also be the case that there is room for an upstart challenger with the right innovation, a fresh approach and perhaps a clean slate.

Banks and telecoms struggle to improve their standing

Banking and telecoms brands rank lowest of all in many markets for reputation and trust, and last year saw little improvement, though banks did at least pull level with telecoms. As with other sectors, many brands have arguably served customers well in difficult times (with connectivity even more vital in the case of telecoms), but this has not helped erode distrust appreciably. Frustrated CMOs may feel that their brands continue to be taken for granted – unfortunately for them, “business as usual” means treading water in terms of reputation. Across 2,500 brands, seven of the ten lowest-ranked for reputation are banks, the most prominent being Deutsche Bank in its home country.

Brand Value

- Enterprise Value
  The value of the entire enterprise, made up of multiple branded businesses.
  Where a company has a purely mono-branded architecture, the “enterprise value” is the same as “branded business value”.

- Branded Business Value
  The value of a single branded business operating under the subject brand.
  A brand should be viewed in the context of the business in which it operates. Brand Finance always conducts a branded business valuation as part of any brand valuation. We evaluate the full brand value chain in order to understand the links between marketing investment, brand-tracking data, and stakeholder behaviour.

- Brand Contribution
  The overall uplift in shareholder value that the business derives from owning the brand rather than operating a generic brand.
  The brand values contained in our league tables are those of the potentially transferable brand assets only, making ‘brand contribution’ a wider concept. An assessment of overall ‘brand contribution’ to a business provides additional insights to help optimise performance.

- Brand Value
  The value of the trade mark and associated marketing IP within the branded business.
  Brand Finance helped to craft the internationally recognised standard on Brand Valuation – ISO 10668. It defines brand as a marketing-related intangible asset including, but not limited to, names, terms, signs, symbols, logos, and designs, intended to identify goods, services or entities, creating distinctive images and associations in the minds of stakeholders, thereby generating economic benefits.

Brand Valuation Methodology.

Definition of Brand

Brand is defined as a marketing-related intangible asset including, but not limited to, names, terms, signs, symbols, logos, and designs, intended to identify goods, services, or entities, creating distinctive images and associations in the minds of stakeholders, thereby generating economic benefits.

Brand Value

Brand value refers to the present value of earnings specifically related to brand reputation. Organisations own and control these earnings by owning trademark rights.

All brand valuation methodologies are essentially trying to identify this, although the approach and assumptions differ. As a result published brand values can be different.

These differences are similar to the way equity analysts provide business valuations that are different to one another. The only way you find out the “real” value is by looking at what people really pay.

As a result, Brand Finance always incorporates a review of what users of brands actually pay for the use of brands in the form of brand royalty agreements, which are found in more or less every sector in the world.

This is sometimes known as the “Royalty Relief” methodology and is by far the most widely used approach for brand valuations since it is grounded in reality.

It is the basis for a public rankings but we always augment it with a real understanding of people’s perceptions and their effects on demand – from our database of market research on over 3000 brands in over 30 markets.

Disclaimer

Brand Finance has produced this study with an independent and unbiased analysis. The values derived and opinions produced in this study are based only on publicly available information and certain assumptions that Brand Finance used where such data was deficient or unclear. Brand Finance accepts no responsibility and will not be liable in the event that the publicly available information relied upon is subsequently found to be inaccurate. The opinions and financial analysis expressed in the report are not to be construed as providing investment or business advice. Brand Finance does not intend the report to be relied upon for any reason and excludes all liability to any body, government or organisation.

We then apply the royalty rate to the forecast revenues to derive brand revenues and apply the relevant valuation assumptions to arrive at a discounted, post-tax present value which equals the brand value.
Brand Strength.

Brand Strength

Brand Strength is the efficacy of a brand’s performance on intangible measures, relative to its competitors.

In order to determine the strength of a brand, we look at Marketing Investment, Stakeholder Equity, and the impact of those on Business Performance.

Each brand is assigned a Brand Strength Index (BSI) score out of 100, which feeds into the brand value calculation. Based on the score, each brand is assigned a corresponding rating up to AAA+ in a format similar to a credit rating.

Analysing the three brand strength measures helps inform managers of a brand’s potential for future success.

Marketing Investment

• A brand that has high Marketing Investment but low Stakeholder Equity may be on a path to growth. This high investment is likely to lead to future performance in Stakeholder Equity which would in turn lead to better Business Performance in the future.

• However, high Marketing Investment over an extended period with little improvement in Stakeholder Equity would imply that the brand is unable to shape customers’ preference.

Stakeholder Equity

• The same is true for Stakeholder Equity. If a company has high Stakeholder Equity, it is likely that Business Performance will improve in the future.

• However, if the brand’s poor Business Performance persists, it would suggest that the brand is inefficient compared to its competitors in transferring stakeholder sentiment to a volume or price premium.

Business Performance

• Finally, if a brand has a strong Business Performance but scores poorly on Stakeholder Equity, it would imply that, in the future, the brand’s ability to drive value will diminish.

• However, if it is able to sustain these higher outputs, it shows that the brand is particularly efficient at creating value from sentiment compared to its competitors.

Widely recognised factors deployed by marketers to create brand loyalty and market share.

Perceptions of the brand among different stakeholder groups, with customers being the most important.

Quantitative market and financial measures representing the success of the brand in achieving price and volume premium.
